Reflection Time

'Do to others as you would have them do to you.'

Luke 6:31

In this week's worship, we explored the theme of serving others by treating them with dignity and respect. Through the story of Elijah and the widow of Zarephath, we were reminded that God values every person, especially those who may be overlooked or undervalued by others. The widow showed kindness and generosity to Elijah despite having very little herself, while Elijah treated her with respect and trusted that God had a purpose for her. Their actions demonstrate that serving others often begins with simple acts of listening, kindness and valuing people for who they are.

This week in our Picture News, we looked at the news that Nepal has announced that its wild tiger population has more than tripled, rising from 121 tigers in 2010, to 429 today. Officials say the turnaround is a result of years of protected wildlife corridors and local communities working hand-in-hand with conservationists to protect big cats. The children considered the question: ‘Do wild animals have as much right to the land as we do?’

Do wild animals have as much right to the land as we do?

In the news this week

Nepal has announced that its wild tiger population has more than tripled, rising from 121 tigers in 2010, to 429 today. Officials say the turnaround is the result of years of protected wildlife corridors and local communities working hand-in-hand with conservationists to protect the big cats. With tiger numbers now increasing, more encounters between tigers and nearby villages are leaving experts asking how people and wildlife can safely share the same land going forward.

Things to talk about at home ...

- Do you think it's fair that wild animals need the same land that people want to use? Why?
- If you lived near a forest with tigers, would you feel excited, nervous, or both? What would help you feel safe?
- Is there an animal, plant, or wild space near where you live that you believe deserves more protection? What would or could you do to help it?
